Abstract

When you write a text, you must first decide which class you choose. Not only a decision of writing an article or a book is necessary, you must also choose a class family. This file will help you with your decision.

-L^AT_EX-beginners can start with this article, advanced T_EXies will find some new hints. If you do not agree with some statements, please inform me. I am no expert and will be happy for corrections.

Table 2: Example for the test document

1 Preface

L^AT_EX defines some standard classes like `article`, `report`, `book` and `letter`. Except the letter class `letter` all classes define some main commands like `\section` or environments like `itemize`, `enumerate` and `description`.

Together they are a class family. There are also other families of classes, like the Koma-Script-class (`scrartcl`, `scrbook`...). You will find examples for this families in Table 1. One family contains normally a class for an article, book and letters.

This file gives you an overview for different families. Classes for letters like `letter` or `scrlettr` are not handled in this file.

2 Creation of the examples

All results of this document are created with a file like in figure 2. The example text with its environments is created with the packet `blindtext`. With `layout` the layout was checked.

The classes are taken from T_EXLive 7.

alphabet and it should be written in of the original language. There is no need for a special contents, but the length of words should match to the language.
